Combating the Rural Healthcare Crisis

About the BC Rural Health Network

Originally formed in 2017

A collective of health advocacy groups from across rural BC

Grew organically through the need for representation on rural health

Expanded to include municipalities

Expanded to include University Research and other active Non-Profits

Our Work

Communication Conduit

- we listen to our membership and the general public to hear about community level challenges.
- we transfer knowledge to our membership and the general public from trusted sources.
- we transfer knowledge from the membership and the general public to governments.
- we provide local and regional solutions to authorities through high level interaction with policy makers.
- we inform the grassroots of our communities, our volunteers, our hospice workers, our community services and generally work to improve the recognition of rural healthcare providers.

Community volunteers are the backbone of our Board of Directors.

Advocacy

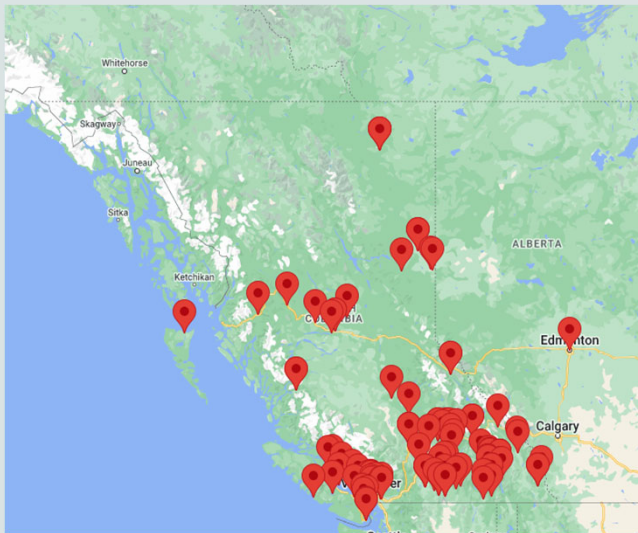

- We advocate for equity in health outcomes for all British Columbians
- We advocate for the ability to live in place in rural BC
- We advocate for a robust public healthcare system
- We advocate for science based management and solutions
- We advocate for community centric care and community based health management teams

We are apolitical, we are solutions based, we are a registered charity

Please join us and add the voice of your community to ours
